My favorite iPad rule is the one about clean hands and clean iPads. I hate it someone hands me the iPad for me to help them and their screen is all grimy and gross.

The Acceptable Use Policy is all about what we can and cannot do with the technology here at The MET. We are supposed to take care of our iPads and not use it for anything bad. If we don't follow the rules our iPad will be taken away.

I agree with these three rules:

I will log off the computer when I am finished using it. I hate it when I go to use a computer and someone is still logged in. Then I need to waste time and go and find them so that they can log off.

I will always be polite and not use hurtful language. I have a cousin who had bad things said about her on Facebook. It really hurt her, and I wish that everyone would follow this rule.

I will not harm or destroy any equipment or information on purpose. Last year someone deleted a report I had worked on for three weeks. It made me really mad and I had to redo all of it.

I do not agree with this rule:

I will not change the setting on any school computer without permission. I don't think it fair that I have to ask my teacher for permission every time I want to change my background image.
